Source. Make. Delight.

The snacks people love start with where ingredients come from and how they're made.

To lead the future of snacking, Hershey is focused on the way we source our ingredients, make our iconic treats, and delight consumers—while supporting the communities and resources behind them. It's how we're bringing sustainability to life today and building a more responsible future for generations to come.

Cocoa
Cocoa is one of Hershey's most important ingredients, used in many of the products our consumers love.

Human Rights
We operate our business with the understanding that we are integral members of the communities where we live and work.

Responsible Sourcing
Our Responsible Sourcing strategy guides how we positively contribute to the resilience of the communities and ecosystems we depend on to source ingredients, manufacture and deliver our products.

Environment
Our business depends upon the health of the planet—the air we breathe, the water that nourishes the earth and the soil in which our ingredients grow. That's why environmental stewardship continues to be integral to our business strategy.

People
We believe that businesses that take care of their employees can achieve more. When our people thrive, so does our business.

Community
Our commitment to making a difference in communities has been central to our identity for more than 130 years.

Youth
We believe that every child deserves the chance to reach their full potential. We've been connecting kids to brighter futures for more than 130 years.
